

Title:

Business Analyst Intern at Web 2.0 Technology Consulting Firm

Description:

Rich Applications Consulting (RAC) is hiring a business analyst intern with proven expertise in the following areas:

- Self-management
- Attention to detail
- Excellent written and oral communication
- Some understanding of the Web 2.0 and internet programming world (or the ability to learn the lingo quickly)
- Flexibility and willingness to work outside the standard job description

This position is unlike other business analyst positions because RAC is unlike other companies. RAC is a fast-growing, young company in the Web 2.0 space developing technologies to lead international clients into the 21st century.

The ideal candidate will be a high-velocity self starter who doesn't just wait for the work to find them. This person will be responsible for liaising with clients and development teams on a regular basis, understanding the needs of existing and potential clients, and communicating those needs to developers in crystal clear way that can't be misunderstood. Because this person will be the face of the company, they must have superior communication skills across written, oral, and visual media.

The business analyst intern will nurture client relationships and work to convert potential clients into customers, but there is no cookie cutter set of functions for this job. The business analyst intern will wear many hats and should be flexible enough to take on different roles at once.

This position will report directly to the Director of Sales and Marketing with high level visibility throughout the organization. Training, mentorship, and guidance will be a regular benefit of this position, with the intern enjoying regular meetings with director-level team members and the CEO.

About RAC:

RAC is a small web technology company looking to make waves by creating applications that change the way people live. We measure our success by the impact we have on peoples' lives, and we strive to make a difference in everything we do. We are passionate, fun-loving people who are experts at coding in both emerging and established languages. Our consultants work with national and international clients.

Each client is paired with an experienced consulting team that will listen to the client's current needs, devise a comprehensive and cutting-edge solution, and work with the client through iterations until everyone is satisfied. Our company is not just about results; we also believe in the importance of the process required to take a flawless product live on the web.
